Doing Good from Hard Places

Cortlyn, a fifth grader in our program, believes that you must do good to get you through the bad. Cortlyn lives with his single mom and has an absentee father who has been in and out of jail. He is a young boy who has had to grow up quickly to become the man of the house. His mom has been his greatest supporter. She tells him all the time that he is going to be somebody one day; we couldn't agree more.

Every month in LNF after-school, Cortlyn is learning how to build a College & Career portfolio. Through these activities this year, Cortlyn says he has found his overall purpose in life: helping others. He aspires to go to college and major in psychology. Cortlyn wants to become a counselor or therapist.

At LNF, Cortlyn has learned that his past bad experiences are going to be used for good in his future. He lives by the words of his mom every single day and is eager to be an influence to other children who come from hard places.

It is possible to multiply good. We see that at our programs when Cortlyn shows love and encouragement to his peers, despite the challenges he is facing at home. Just like Cortlyn, we can not do it on our own; we must do good together. Because of your generosity in 2014, LNFI was able to expand its' programs to reach children like Cortlyn. On his behalf, we THANK YOU!
